

From SMOKER
Comic
UNCLE LOU – Male (50s-60s)

Hold on a second! Are you saying I'm not environmentally friendly? How in the hell is it environmentally friendly if you gotta flush the toilet five or six times every other time you take a crap? You want to save water? Hell, if it's yellow, let it mellow. That's the way I roll. And you see that high-efficiency refrigerator? What makes it high efficiency? The compressor works twice as hard. What happens when a compressor works twice as hard? It breaks down twice as fast! What does that mean? It means a fridge that used to last fifteen years now lasts seven years and ends up in a landfill someplace! And God forbid anyone in this country should try and fix something! Oh no. Something breaks, you just drag it to the curb and buy yourself a new one. I swear to God, it breaks my heart when I drive down the street on trash day. Maybe that vacuum cleaner just needs a new switch. Maybe that lawn-mower just needs an overhaul. So when I see a beautiful, perfectly functional piece of art like this five-gallon flushing toilet sitting out in somebody's trash, you can bet your sweet ass I'm gonna stop and throw it in my truck. If I can't use it, somebody else can. And if it's broken, I can fix it. And if that's not being environmentally friendly, I don't know what the hell is!

--Published in 222 More Comedy Monologue 2 Minutes & Under, Smith and Kraus (2017).